We are pleased to inform you that Institute of Public Enterprise (IPE) is conducting a 'Research Methodology Course for Ph.D. Students in Social Sciences' on "New Paradigms in Research Methodology for Social Science Research" during 15th to 25th March 2017 at its premises.

As you are kindly aware social science research grew at a distinctive phase in recent years due to methodological innovations and the ascent of qualitative and quantitative approaches towards research. These approaches became discipline-based and specialized because of the specific nature of the problems that require more focused and in-depth research. Social and economic transformations in the society threw up challenges not only relating to the effectiveness of the government programs and policies but also concerning the structural changes, inequity and emerging social and economic distortions. Consequently social scientists innovated coherent themes and imbibed strong and positive approach in research. Application of qualitative and quantitative techniques in research virtually triumphed over theoretical research.

Keeping in view these challenges, the proposed research methodology course provides training for research scholars who are pursuing Ph.D in Social Sciences to get acquainted with new paradigms in social science research and methodological innovations.

We plan to cover the subjects on; Research Methodology - Primer, Building Blocks of Research, Effective Literature Review, Arriving at Research Problem, Essentials in data Analysis, Qualitative / Quantitative Methods, Designing of Questionnaires (Online/Off line), Sampling techniques, Econometrics, Exposure to SPSS/Strata, etc, Demonstration and Practicals. Teaching at IPE is interactive, which combines, lectures, case studies, group discussion and presentations, role plays, etc..
