SCHOOL OF ENGLISH AND FOREIGN LANGUAGES

The School of English and Foreign Languages mainly consists of two departments viz. English and French.

The Indian High Commission in London proposed first for the creation of French and German departments in the University of Madras. In 1928, French was taught in the intermediate and Bachelors courses. In 1983 a full fledged department of French came into being. It offers Certificate, Diploma, Masters, M.Phil and . Programmes.

The department of English was established in 1969 and it started specializing in Literary Criticism, Commonwealth literature, American Literature, and English language teaching. Currently the department offers Masters, M.Phil and . programmes.

dimensions of French civilisation. It also traces how culture and civilisation in France has evolved down the ages from Prehistoric times to the Mid XVIIIth century. It includes therefore a study of: a) the major social, historical and political events of this epoch b) some aspects of everyday life in France during this period c) scientific and technical advances made during this period d) the evolution of arts and literature during this period.

EFL C 107  Histoire de la littérature française : XVIIIe siècle  C  2  1  0  3  CK/BB

The XVIII century France was an age known as that of philosophers. During this century one sees the progress of the philosophical spirit in tandem with the classical school of thought. The age drew to a close when the romantic sensibility made its appearance. This course seeks therefore to Study the influence of philosophy and literary creation Trace the gradual emergence of remarkable literary trends. Gain an insight into the aesthetic sensibility of the French writers

EFL C 108  Histoire de la littérature française : XIXe siècle  C  2  1  0  3  CK/BB

The turbulent history of France is reflected in the literature of this period through the transition from philosophy to romanticism. The second half saw the currents of positivism, realism, idealism and symbolism with a wealth of literary production that saw strongly opposed schools of thought emerging.

EFL C 109  Civilisation III (1900-2000)  C  3  1  0  4  CK/BB

The study of an epoch torn apart by the two world wars and under the ever-growing threat of cataclysmic events is essential to a student of French literature since these events moulded the literature of the XX century and set the tone for future creations. This course seeks to present the diverse aspects that go to make up contemporary French society through a study of various aspects including the social, historic and political events from 1918 through May 1968 to the present day. French institutions—role and functions The identity and status of France in the European Union The socio-cultural problems related to features such as immigration, unemployment

| EFL C 110 | Histoire de la littérature française -XXe siècle- Roman et critique | C | 2 | 1 | 0 | 3 | CK/BB |

The 20th century was marked by experimentation and the remarkable development of the novel as a literary form. The novelists who painted contemporary customs and traditions had liberal, socialist and diverse tendencies. The abundance of schools of thought in the domain of criticism reveals the richness of literary culture existing in France. A study of these tendencies is essential to an understanding of the literature of France and to place it in the context of world literature. This course therefore seeks to present a panoramic view of the development of the novel and literary criticism during the 20th century. Conduct a detailed study of great novelists and critics and monumental works that have marked the world literary arena.

| EFL C 111 | Histoire de la littérature française -XXe siècle- Théâtre et Poésie | C | 2 | 1 | 0 | 3 | CK/BB |

This course has the ambitious objective of introducing two genres— theatre and poetry, both have which illustrate names in the pantheon of French literature in the XX century. The reformation of the theatrical scenario with the introduction of technical and artistic innovation wrought major changes in the dramatic creation. The poetic creations revealed the anguish and confusion of a world that had been disrupted and poetry sought new forms of expression. In theatre as in poetry the course intends to undertake an in-depth study and analysis of the works of representative dramatists/poets who have dominated the 20th century. A study of important extracts that give an accurate representation of the art and philosophy of the authors.

| EFL C 112 | Francophonie et les Littératures francophones | C | 3 | 1 | 0 | 4 | CK/BB |

Francophonie is a modern movement that is gaining momentum, importance and international recognition in the political, social, economic and literary fronts. The course therefore seeks to glean an understanding of the concept and the movement of Francophonie. Give a panoramic view of the various literatures that are included in this field. Open up avenues that can be explored for future research Allow the student to understand the truly unique phenomenon namely World French Literature.

| EFL E 117 | Grands Mouvements artistiques en France : I | E | 2 | 1 | 0 | 3 | GF |

The history of Art of France reveals unfathomed treasures and will certainly serve to promote a better understanding of the aesthetic vision imbided by the artists of this epoch. The course will include a study of Romanesque and Gothic architecture, the art of Renaissance and Classical Art of the XVII and XVIII centuries.

| EFL E 118 | Stage - Practical Summer Internship | E | 0 | 0 | 3 | 3 | CK |

This practical application of the linguistic and cultural skills acquired will be done over a 40 day internship with any French based company/ NGO /Bank /organisation so that the student obtains a hands-on experience. The course evaluation will be based partly on the evaluation submitted by the head of the organization where the student did the internship and will include the submission of a report and a viva voce.

| EFL E 119 | French For Beginners: III | E | 2 | 1 | 0 | 3 | BB/GF |

A further study of French will allow the student to acquire sufficient skills in the language, to give him autonomy in its practice and future use.

This course seeks to give the learners an initiation into the theory and practice of the art of translation. The course therefore involves: the study of the “notions de base” of translation the study of the techniques of translation the study of the theories of translation: linguistic and interpretative.

The course seeks to prepare the learners for an essential understanding of the diverse aspects of pedagogy of languages. It has therefore a two pronged approach being at once both linguistic and methodological. The course therefore involves: a critical description of the methodologies of FLE based on a linguistic approach (méthode grammaire‐traduction, méthode directe, méthode audio‐orphe, méthode audio‐visuelle and approche communicative) a coherent and rational initiation into practical application of the theories

This helps the student prepare an independent, thorough and guided in-depth study in the chosen field and submit a coherent and concise report of the activities. It also enables the student to come to terms with his/her potential for academic research, sustained study and original thinking. This paper is therefore an essential component for post-graduate study.

The course continues the in-depth study and analysis of the artistic vision of France and will sensitise the students to the creative forces that governed the and XIX and X centuries including “Romantisme”, “Réalisme”, “Impressionnisme, “Surréalisme”, “Fauvisme” and “Cubisme” among other movements

The course will consolidate the skills acquired in French in the three preceding semesters and enable the students to develop proficiency in communication.

EFL C001 English Poetry – I | C 4 1 - 5 | CTI

This paper has the following objectives:

[1] To examine the literary institutions that came up in the Elizabethan period promoting indigenization of European forms like the sonnet, the allegorical poem, the romance poem etc.
To study how the political and socio-cultural forces acting in England during that period determined to some extent the directions these literary forms took. In other words the over-all approach to the subject will combine the old historical method of studying literary forms as well as the New Historical method of examining the cultural practices which are also part of the "text" and no more mere background information. The paper will also look at the transition from the 16th to the 17th century when New Philosophy and New Science greatly influenced the Metaphysical poetry. In this context, the development of religious poetry will also be examined.

To survey the development of English Poetry from Chaucer to the 18th Century.

Middle English Poetry
Chaucer: "The General Prologue" Lines 1-100 - Knight and Squire 118-162 - Nun (Prioress) 479-530 - Parson 165-207 - Monk 413-478 - Wife of Bath

EFL C003 British Drama  C 3 1 - 4 PR/SA

Description:
This paper proposes to introduce to students the trends and movements in British Drama from 16th Century to the present. It aims to focus on the socio-cultural context of these movements and the political factors that determine the history of theatre.

EFL E001 Theatre  E 2 - 1 3 PR

Description:
In most Colleges drama is taught virtually the same way as one would teach a poem or a piece of prose fiction. Unlike other forms of literature, drama is meant to be performed if its multidimensional nature is to unfold itself. With this in mind, the course on theatre is designed with an accent on performance rather than on classroom teaching. In the absence of any infrastructure for theatre in the University of Madras, the course will confine itself only to those adjuncts of drama that can be highlight with our limited resources. The prescribed texts would be approached in a way that the students learn the intricacies of dialogue delivery, the subtle nuances of acting, stage setting, lighting and make-up. On the theoretical side, the students will be made to acquaint themselves with the history of drama from classical times to our own day. The plays chosen for study lend themselves to performance and theoretical discourse. A Greek play - Oedipus Rex (Sophocles) A Modern play - The Glass Menagerie (T. Williams) An Indian Play in translation - Nagamandala (Girish Karnad)

Note: To select this elective subject the students must pass an audition test. Not more than fifteen students will be admitted.

EFL E002 Communication Skills (Listening and Speaking Skills)  E 2 1 - 3 G.F.

All oral communication is an exercise in public relations. This Course will explain, demonstrate and help learn the art of listening and speaking effectively. EFL C006 | Shakespeare Studies | C | 3 | 2 | 5 | CTI

The objective of this paper is to read a chosen Shakespeare text in the light of cultural criticism which has emerged prominent in the last two decades. The approach would include ideological concepts from Feminist and Colonial and Post-Colonial discourses. It also means focussing on the impact of Post-Structuralism on Shakespeare Studies. Another objective of the paper is to choose plays to review the traditional concepts of genres like Romantic Comedy, the problem play etc. Thus the paper hopes to demonstrate how Shakespeare lends himself to all developing approaches, and hence his status as a canonical author. It also studies select sonnets.

EFL C007  |  American Literature  | C  | 3  | 1  | 5  | PR/DV

This is a survey paper and an attempt will be made to provide an overview of major authors and the literary schools they belong to. We begin with Walt Whitman, who by common consent is the father of American poetry and who has influenced a host of American poets of the subsequent generations. On the same consideration Poe and O'Neill have been chosen for study. Each writer included in the syllabus has made a significant contribution to the development of American literature. Even as we deal with their works, there will be a discourse on the social and political events that have a bearing on their writing - in that sense the paper has a two-fold thrust. The students will be exposed to the main literary genres (poetry, drama and prose-fiction) - with only representative authors being chosen for study.

Poetry
Walt Whitman : Out of the cradle endlessly rocking / Passage to India.
Emily Dickinson : The last night that she lived -The soul selects her own society -I dreaded the first robin, so
Anne Bradstreet : The Prologue
Frost : Home Burial-After Apple-picking
Wallace Stevens : Thirteen ways of looking at blackbird / Peter Quince at the Clavier.
Robert Lowell : Skunk Hour
Sylvia Plath : Lady Lazarus, Daddy, Ariel
Denise Levertow : Scenario-Thinking About El Salvador
Adrienne Rich : Snapshots of a Daughter-in-Law
Joy Harjo : Remember, I give you back
Leslie Marmon Silko : Story from Bear Country
Victor Hernandez Cruz : Today is a day of great joy Drama
O'Neill : The Emperor Jones / Desire Under the Elms
Miller : Death of a Salesman / All My Sons
Williams : A Streetcar Named Desire / The Glass Menagerie
Ntozake Shange : For Colored Girl Fiction
Poe : The Cask of Amontillado
Hawthorne : The Birth Mark
Melville : Bartleby the Scrivener
Faulkner : As I lay Dying
Saul Bellow : Herzog Prose
Amy Tan : Mother Tongue
Emason : The American Scholar

EFL C008  |  Literary Criticism and Theory  | C  | 2  | 1  | 4  | CTI/RA

The paper aims at acquainting the student of literature with the conceptual premises of literary appreciation. Hence, it examines seminal literary critics in terms of representative samples to show how the concepts of imitation and creation constitute the two poles of literary criticism. The objective of this paper is also to place the study of literature in the context of changing historical perspectives on man, his self, society and the impact of ideology on reading practices. Hence, this paper proposes to examine texts from the classical humanist tradition, the liberal tradition and the later writings belonging to economic and political traditions which provide a critique of Enlightenment.

Part I - Literary Criticism
The paper plans to explore the alternative model of Enlightenment offered by the Victorian prose writers. The contribution of the thinkers of the Victorian Age was undermined early in the 20th century because of the influence of T.S. Eliot and the Modernist Movement. However, since the 70s, significant revolutions of Victorian thought have been published, doing justice to the intellectual merit and the socio-cultural relevance of their thought to our democratic age. The early Victorian Prose writers like Carlyle highlighted the virtue of tradition and aristocracy which will help contain a revolution simmering under the discontent of the working class. Cardinal Newman earnestly argued against the virtues of Liberalism and pleaded for restoration of religious faith to stem the tide of atheism. Matthew Arnold combined the best of Liberal thought and the virtue of Agnosticism and pleaded for an international approach to culture which alone would save England from anarchy. What he said of England holds good for India today. Ruskin anticipated Marxism and socialism in his profound critique of the economic situation prevailing in his time. He combined the ardour of a socialist with the sense of Beauty of an aesthete. All these Victorian thinkers fought against Philistinism and hence their relevance to us today.

1. Carlyle: Signs of the Times
2. Arnold: 1. Sweetness and Light
   2. Doing as one likes
5. J.S. Mill: i) Individuality
   ii) The Criterion of a Good form of Government
6. Lionel Trilling
